FLYING DISCS REPORTED

THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L.

During warm weather we strongly suspect that trout hibernate in bottom of big pools in rivers and in the deep recesses of the lakes. They hibernate (it's the wrong word of course), just like the bears do in winter. Being cold blooded, fish probably suffer from the heat just as bears would in the exterior cold of Sierra winters.

The trout just naturally go to sleep in the coolest sections of their habitat, and no fly spattering the surface, no worm, no shaggy salmon egg, or helgramite, drifting in front of their white lips, will tempt them. They are taking a siesta in the crystal domain that is their home. Their ppetite, dwindled to almost nothing by lack of exercise, are finicky and during their brief forays morning and evening, they can examine each morsel. putative insect or what not, with the care and discretion of nature's most critical gourmet. We realize full well that here is no place for a tyro fisherman to try his luck. The trout in his natural element is smarter than the bird with the hook and line.

So we turn to bass. And about bass we know even less than about trout. We know of three varieties. Bass with large mouths, bass with small mouths, and bass that live in both saline and fresh water, that wear stripes, very pretty ones too. There was a time when we knew the striped bass very well indeed, big fellows they were, up to 42 pounds, and that's some fish in any fisherman's language. We knew them from the minute they broke the slumbering surface of the slough until they appeared on the table after baking, piping hot and under a blanket of mild peppers and mushrooms. Those were the days!

But these small and large mouthed bass are utter strangers to us. We hear they rise to very gaily colored plugs and "Australian Wrigglers"—whatever those are. In case neither of these tempts them, a large ornate fly, something like a small butterfly, made of horsehair, will excite their gullible gullets, and cause them to strike just like a hawk strikes a chicken.

Now in case we should land a mess of these bass, either with the large or the small mouths, we shall inviatbly give them an I. Q. far below the trout. Why? Well, merely because we able to land them, and, so far this season, were unable to land a single rainbow, German Brown or eastern brook. But we still live in the rosy future, when the time, the fly, and the trout all coincide in an ecastatic moment, or series of moments.

Where is this enchanted spot where small or large mouthed bass bite like hydromatic demons? Nah, nah. We are not going to tell. It's a secret place. The grass on the banks is very green, indeed, and a graceful boat sits on the water moored and waiting for the lucky fisherman to push off. The water is deep and blue and teems with big small and large mouthed bass, Nah, nah, it's a secret.

WHEATLAND THUGS GET 5 AND 15 YEARS

SACRAMENTO: Federal Judge Dal Lemmon Thursday afternoon sentenced Vernon H. Byers, 22, who pleaded guilty to the robbery of the Wheatland, Yuba County branch of the Bank of America to 15 years in prison. His companion, Ralph Thurman, 28, was given a five year sentence.

Before Judge Lemmon announced the sentence Robert A. Zarich, Byers' attorney, informed the court his client felt Thurman was not as involved as he but had taken part in the robbery only because he was incluenced to do so.

Zarich said Byers, a paratrooper during the the war had been educated to be vicious and his readjustment period had not taken effect.

"He wants an opportunity to serve his sentence and come back, to face the world squarely," Zarich stated.

"I dislike meting out punishment to young men of 22," Judge Lemmon declared, "but this is a serious crime. These men are not only guilty of robbery but using a firearm and endangering lives."

A third member of the gang, Gratien Octave Etchebarne, 9, was wounded fatally June 11th when he attempted to flee from Sheriff Richard Hoskins of Nevada County the day after the robbery.

Thurman was captured within a few hours after the bank robbery, and Byers surrendered to possemen June 12th. Bank officials reported practically all of the $14,800 tavern by the trio was recovered.

CAMPBELL FAMILY SIGHTS AIR-BORNE SAUCERS SATURDAY A. M.

NEVADA CITY: Flying discs which undulated, sparkling, and disappeared upwards and to the north were reported by Mrs. C. G. Campbell, who with her husband and grandchild, saw the glittering, high-speed objects at 11 a. m. Saturday, at their home on the Borman Ranch, 10 miles from Nevada City on the Downieville Highway.

G. G. Campbell, who was sitting under a tree in the shade, was the first to sight the strange objects.

He called to his wife with a loud yell or excitement. She and her ten year old grandaughter, Carol, rushed outside and observed the objects glimmering in the sky at an undetermined altitude.

"They looked like good sized dinner plates", said Mrs. Campbell, but I supposed they were about 15 feet in diameter. They were perfectly round, and they shone like silver."

"The discs flew through the air with an undulating motion. Some of them seemed to circle around the others. There were between 10 and 12. No particular pattern was followed, but they grouped and regrouped in clusters of three and four, until, in a sudden burst of speed, the disappeared."

Mrs. Campbell rushed into the house for a pair of binoculars, but when she returned, the discs were no longer in sight.

NEVADA COUNTY TO BE IN CENTENNIAL BROCHURE

SACRAMENTO: The romantic, historic and scenic background which will form the setting for California's gold centennial celebrations will be presented to the nation in an 80 page pictorial brochure sponsored by the Sacramento Region Secretary Managers Association.

The association, representing chambers of commerce in 19 counties in the Golden Empire, meeting in Sacramento, voted unanimously for the publication as the first major move in publicizing the forthcoming centennial years commemorating the discovery of gold in 1848, the gold rush in 1849 and the California statehood in 1850.

Under the present plans the pictorial will devote four pages each to scenes deptcing the most historic and scenic spots in each of the counties in the Golden Empire. Nevada County will be among those represented with a four page section.

Ray Kronemeyer of Grass Valley, president of the association, announced that the publication will be off the press before the first of the year. He named as a committee to supervise distribution of the pictorial on a national scale Mrs. Frances Couillard of Soda Springs, head of the Donner Summit Improvement Club, Fred N. Boothman, secretary-manager of the North Sacramento District Chamber of Commerce, and Ralph K. Clark publicity director of the Sacramento chamber of commerce.

Rodney Richardson, recently appointed by the state director of finance to coordinate centennial celebrations told the association that the five men centennial commission recently approved by the legislature will be established September 19. The group will have a $250,000 appropriation with which to work.

GIRL SCOUTS CHOOSE SCOTT'S FLAT SITE

NEVADA CITY: Girl Scout councilors, following a vote of parents and others interested, have definitely decided to choose Scott's Flat as the site for a permanent camp for the organization.

Rucker Lake was considered but, its distance, 29 miles, as compared with 9 miles to Scott's Flat and the fact that Rucker Lake, because of its altitude, would be open only in the summer, resulted in the choice of Scott's Flat. The camp will be established on land belonging to the Nevada Irrigation District under a long term lease.

Boating, but no swimming, will be permitted in the lake at Scott's Flat, and this will necessitate building a pool. But the advantages of being near to doctors, markets and various supplies offsets the swimming handicap. he camp site will consist of between 60 and 80 acres.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder what price royalty,
Yes, what price kings and queens
And princesses and princes too,
And ceremonial scenes.
I'm democratic, so I am,
Democracy I boost,
But now, what price democracy
When John L. rules the roost.

I wonder if you ever wasted time imagining what you would do with some one else's big income if it were your own. I have, and upon considering the regal income granted England's lovely young Princess Elizabeth, I formulated a five year plan and spent her one hundred thousand dollars per annum, in a most delightful fashion.

I restored the San Juan Ridge to its olden state of productivity and found great vicarious pleasure in the process. First, I built a dam across a mountain stream which bears the startling name of Bloody Run, constructed flumes and trestles and brought a plentiful supply of water to the towns and farms which soon blossomed as the rose, and recaptured all the beauty and glamor lost of old. I built a hotel in San Juan, replacing the one. destroyed some years ago by fire: I created a swimming pool in Sweetland Creek at the point where Francis Proom and other enterprising youngsters built a dam across the stream and I rebuilt the little pioneer school house down in the hollow. I was just beginning to erect a hotel in Sweetland when my imaginary workmen struck—just walked of all the jobs and the shock of this tregedy sent my fanciful pursuits flying through the air like saucers on parade.

"Democracy," I thought, "how many serious sins are committed in thy name!" Of course, workers have the right to "walk off the job," but, allowing one burly man with outstanding eyebrows to tell the mwhen and where and for how long—doesn't that make him cock of the walk?

I wonder if it is necessary to arm European nations, train their armies and feed their wariors. I'm glad that America can feed and clothe the destitute people of other lands, but if they are able to support armies and fight each other, do they really need or assistance?

I'd like to see the war ravaged nations on their feet again; I'd like the see their devastated fields replanted and their shattered homes rebuilt; but, if we are just setting them up like nine pins and getting them ready to mow each down, I'm agin' it.

Probably, every statesman and diplomat in Washington, would tell me that I don't know what I'm talking about and it is very likely that they would be right, still I'm asking, "what price restoration, if it leads hot-headed nations into another and yet another war?"

A new slogan, "keep California green and golden," composed by a young school boy should be engraven upon the hearts of all vacationists. By all means spend your days of rest and recreation in the beautiful forests of this great state—but,

Keep California green and golden. —Adeline Merriam Conner.

LOOKING AHEAD

Story With a Moral

One time there was a young man, the younger son of a well-to-do farmer. Times were good, prices were high. It was a period of prosperity for everybody. Apparently, spending had become a habit with most of the folks in that community. At any rate, this son saw that others were having a good time spending money. Since everybody's doing it, he thought, why shouldn't I enjoy myself?

So this fine young man who had all the opportunities one could wish for, and a brilliant future in sight, kept after his father until one day "the old man settled him off" with a good deal of money. This country boy then went to town and set out to have himself a better time than he had ever had before. He spent more money than he had ever spent before. Friends were numerous. Playboy super-de luxe, this young man had swarms of lady friends. But they required money.

He Achieved Wisdom

Now, you are wondering, if you have read this far, whether this misguided and pampered lad ever quit spending. He did. He quit spending when a depression set in, for that was the time when he found himself unable to obtain any more money. At this point, our broken down playboy began to think. Wisdom was forced upon him and he learned the hard way. He found he couldn't even buy a sandwich, and panhandling was out of the question. Rather than starve, he took a farm job feeding pigs.

If this lad had done what some of our so-called statesmen advocate, he would have continued to borrow and spend. But having thought the matter through, he went to work, even though his hunger was scarcely outdone by that of the pigs he was sent to feed. He had spent all, and he was in want. You may read the rest of this story in Luke 15, for it is the story of the Prodigal Son who finally came to his senses.

No Money Mill

Must we as a nation spend all that we have before we come to our senses, like the Prodigal Son? With signs of depression approaching, we continue to spend and spend, apparently from habit. Doing little or nothing about our monstrous national debt of $260,000,000,000, we continue to look around trying to find things for which to appropriate money.

It is easy to justify any and every expenditure. Constituents in each and every community represented by Senator Bloake and Congressman Doake can spout a whole book of reasons why this or that pet project must go through. Folks are inclined to think that the money for the whole thing is a gift, just because they don't see where it comes from. But the founding fathers did not leave at Washington a mill which flows out perpetual dollars.

Maybe it's not a nice thought, but you can't keep on spending money without knowing where it's coming from. This was a fact the Prodigal Son discovered. Neither can you safely manufacture currency to carry through your spending projects. Either course will soon lead to dire results. A day of reckoning will come to a country that spends all it has, just as it did to the Prodigal Son. Let us have more wisdom than the Prodigal, who found that he could repent only when hard times struck him.

Our spending, as opposed to saving, has created a situation that calls for the best brand of intelligent citizenship. It is already time to go to work. Without being penny wise and pound foolish, we ought to adopt fiscal policies that will cut down our growing debt. There's no prospect of doing this unless we do it while times are good.

Uncle Sam Says

What would $1,000 to $2,000 have meant to you at age 18 when you came face to face with the problem of fitting yourself for a business, profession or trade? Many youngsters, whose parents 10 years ago began to put aside a little each week for the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds, have the advantage of such a nestegg this summer. You can start today to put your children in the class of "bonded graduates" of 1957—the boys and girls who will have the extra power in the race for success. U. S. Treasury Department

SHORTLY AFTER THE WAR ENDED, we announced a construction program which will provide 1,000,000 additional horsepower of electricity and expansion of natural gas distribution facilities to help build a greater California. This program will cost over $350,000,000 during a six-year period. Last year over $44,000,000 was spent on this program, and nearly $7,000,000 a month has been spent so far this year to press forward this vast construction and expansion throughout Northern and Central California.

When the program is completed in 1951 there will be available a total capacity of more than 3,500,000 electric horsepower for distribution to the homes, farms and factories in the area this Company serves.

Down through the great Central Valley from Shasta County to Kern County and along the coastal plain from Humbolt County to Santa Barbara, P. G. & E.'s integrated network of generating and distributing facilities is being expanded as fast as materials and equipment can be made available. Thus we provide electric power and gas service for the future needs of Northern and Central California.

NOTICE! to Nevada Irrigation District Water Users

Due to increased demands the Nevada Irrigation District is having difficulty in supplying its water consumers for this year. The South Yuba Canal, which serves most of Nevada County with water, is now running to its full capacity and no additional water can be obtained until the completion of the Scotts Flat Dam, which is now in course of construction and which will be finished toward the end of this year.

The cooperation of water users is being asked at this time rather than to make more drastic regulations, which may become necessary if cooperation by all water users is not immediately obtained.

There is sufficient water in the system at this time to serve all applicants for water, provided caution is practiced in its use and full cooperation on the part of water users is obtained.

It is requested that no irrigation be done, where a domestic service is supplied, after 7:00 o'clock P. M. and until 7:00 o'clock A. M. Irrigation of lawns and flowers should be limited to the time necessary for the water to get to the roots of plants, and sprinklers should be turned off after running in one place for such time.

It is further requested that no use of water be made directly from hoses without attachment of sprinkler or suitable nozzle, and in no case should water be run out of the hose directly onto the ground without going through a sprinkler.

It is most urgent that users of water stop all unnecessary use of water at this time, and through the hot season of July and August, and that they cooperate to the fullest extent in saving water so that the farmers of the District may receive their allotted quantities of water necessary to raise their crops.

Fall of the Southern Kingdom — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—II Kings 24-25; Jeremiah 37; 39-40.

By Alfred J. Buescher

When Jehoiakim died, his son, Jehoiachin, was made king, but only reigned three months when the Babylonians attacked Judah, captured the king, his mother and nobles, and made him a prisoner, never to return.

The king of Babylon made Zedekiah king in Jehoiachin's place, and during his reign a man named Irijah, accused Jeremiah, the prophet, of betraying his people, and although Jeremiah denied it, he was taken and thrown into prison.

In the ninth year of Zedekiah's reign, Jerusalem again was attacked by the armies of the king of Babylon, which took Zedekiah prisoner and burnt the house of the Lord, the king's house and all the houses of the great men.

After capturing and slaughtering the people of Judah and the king's sons and blinding Zebediah, the king of Babylon made Gedaliah governor of Judah, but Ismael and 10 others slew him.

MEMORY VERSE—Psalms 29:11.

THE - Diary of a 49'er

FROM THE BOOK EDITED BY C. L. CANFIELD

JUNE 16, 1850—Worked but three days last week. Had the cholera morbus pretty bad but some Jamaica ginger fetched me around all right. Took out just two ounces. Henry North wrote me a letter from San Francisco. He was broke and wanted enough money to come here. Sent him fifty dollars. I'll be glad to see him. Got a long letter from Dad. He says mother is grieving about me being so far away and is afraid I will fall into temptation.

She knows from what she sees in the papers that California must be an awful wicked place. Dad tells her that I come from old Connecticut stock and he isn't afraid of his boy not coming out all right. Wonder what he'd say if he knew about my losing money in a game of chance.

I hear that Anson James and his partner took out fourteen hundred dollars on Brush Creek last week. That beats Rock Creek but Brush is all taken up. Anderson is after me to go river mining with him. He is getting up a company of ten men; has seven now and they will put up two hundred and fifty dollars apiece for capital. They want that for lumber, which costs one hundred dollars a thousand feet for wing dams and a flume, whatever that means. If my claim gives out before August, may go with them. Saw two deer on the hill back of the cabin and Anderson says a grizzly was killed up at the head of the creek last week. There are thousands of wild pigeons in the woods but they are not fit to eat. The acorns they feed on make their flesh taste bitter.

JUNE 23, 1850—Have not heard from Henry North. He ought to have been here last week. I have been fairly homesick all week, working in the claim alone, and am so dead tired when night comes that it's a task to cook supper, although there isn't much to cook. There is always a pot of cold beans and I fry a piece of pork for the grease to sop my bread in and make a cup of tea. I roll up in the blankets and go to bed at eight o'clock and try to go to sleep to keep from thinking, although I can't always do it. Thoughts of home come into my head. There is a sort of dog here that the greasers call a coyote and you would swear when night comes on that there were a thousand of them yelping in the hills and around the cabin. Sometimes I get up and go outdoors, out under the stars, and wonder what Hetty is doing and whether she will wait. If she saw me snifling and the tears rolling down my cheeks she would think I wasn't much of a man. I wish Henry North would come. Rich diggings have been found on Kanaka Creek and a lot of miners have gone over to take up claims. Took out a little over five ounces for the week.

There is an Indian campoody up on the ridge above Brush Creek where about two hundred Digger Indians are camped. They are the dirtiest lot of human beings on earth. One has to be careful going near the place or he will surely get the itch. They will eat anything, acorns, grasshoppers, or seeds and I have seen an old squaw pull a rotten pine log apart hunting for a white grub as big as my little finger, and when she found one swallow it alive with as much relish as if it were a fat oyster. BODIES OF AIR CRASH VICTIMS TAKEN TO OAKLAND

NEVADA CITY: The bodies of four bay area men were found late Monday near the wreckage of their small airplane, missing since May 30th, in a heavily wooded canyon 14 miles east of here.

Lloyd Moore, a United States surveyor, discovered the wreckage while working in the area. Sheriff Richard Hoskins and Coroner Alvah Hooper of Grass Valley organized a search party and removed the bodies.

The officials identified the dead as Earl Christensen, 35, and Jens Christensen, 40, brothers of San Leandro, Jess Bernard, 28, and John Payne, 26, both of Oakland.

Deputy Coroner Stanley Mitchell said the plane apparently nosedived into a gentle slope in the Red Hill Springs area, clipped off one tree in its descent. The bodies were fond scattered around the wreckage.

Mitchell said the bodies had been partially devoured by animals and identification was made by papers found in wallets in the clothing.

The bodies of Bernard and Payne were taken out last night and those of the Christensen brothers were removed today.

The plane took off from the Hayward airport on Memorial Day with for and one half hours supply of gasoline.

The remains were transported, on Tuesday night, to Oakland for memorial services. Relatives had decided cremate the bodies.

Sheriff Richard Hoskins stated that three watches were recovered, all stopped at 4 o'clock, indicating the hour of the crash. According to a report from an Oakland airfield, the plant went down on the afternoon of May 30.

GOV. WARREN SIGNS FARM HOUSING BILL

SACRAMENTO: Governor Earl Warren has signed a bill providing for sale of war surplus buildings for farm housing under a program similar to that now being carried on for the benefit of veterans.

The local allocation division of the State Department of Finance, which already is engaged in handling the veterans surplus housing program, was authorized by the new legislation to make sales to farmers, whether or not they are veterans.

The farm housing bill, carrying a $500,000 revolving fund appropriation to make initial purchase of the buildings, continues the surplus sale program carried on by the farm production council prior to dissolution of the agency on June 30.

Buildings are purchased in large groups from the war assets administration or directly from the military reserves, and are sold individually by the department at low, fixed prices on a first come, first served basis. All sales are for cash to permit reuse of the revolving fund for purchase of additional groups of buildings.

POST ARTIST SKETCHES LOGGING SCENES

NEVADA CITY: John Atherton, one of the artists who provides the sketches for the front cover of Saturday Evening Post and other illustrations, with Mrs. Atherton, visiting here with Mrs. Atherton's mother, Mrs. Francis M. Breese, has just returned from a sketching trip in Sierra County.

Mrs. Atherton, the former Miss Maxine Breese, and Atherton met a good many years ago at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco and following competing of their studies there, were married.

Atherton brought back from Sierra County sketches of a gold panner with rocker and pan taken on the North Fork of the Yuba River near Downieville, a scene at the Calida Sawmill when huge logs cut from the virgin forests there were rolled into the pond, and other themes which he thinks might meet the exacting standards of Saturday Evening Post for its front cover.

"There are several of us who draw sketches for the Satrday Evening Post's cover, said Atherton. "Norman Rockwell usually draws some human interest scene. My work is usually of the regional variety, some industry of human activity is depicted. Mead Schaffer does much the same kind of work as I, while John Falter and Stevan Dohanos, do human interest pictures.

"If we have an idea for the front cover we usually submit it to the editors before completing the sketch. If it is approved then we go ahead and finish it. It does not mean even then that the sketch is always accepted, and when it is accepted it may be a year before it appears on the cover. The Caliday management were very kind to me, staging a scene in hich huge trucks dumped their load of logs into the pond, and I assured them it might be a long time before anything came of it, but that said that would be all right."

The Saturday Evening Post artists seldom see the headquarters of their employment. Mr. and Mrs. Aterton, for instance are making their home in Arlington, Vermont, a many miles from Philadelphia. This is Mrs. Atherton's first visit tto California in 20 years. Tney are about to build a new home in Arlington.

MAN FLOATS DOWN RIVER FROM COLUSA

COLUSA: The wife of a 67 year old Placerville orchardist who got the idea of floating down a river on a raft from reading Mark Twain said today he might have to give up his fun and return home "because the pears are getting ripe."

"It's always been his ambition to float down a river," said Mrs. S. A. Bivans, who visited her floating husband as he touched here on a trip he began well up on the Sacramento river at Tehama. "Finally he went ahead."

Bivans has an outboard motor on his raft but as he "put in" here he complained of river snags and a table and stove brushed into the river by overhanging limbs.

With more than a hint he might prefer pear picking, Bivans said he's had "nothing but trouble and 2 teenage grandchildren aboard" on his projected drift south to Rio Vista.

The "coasting" relatives are Donna Mae Rickets, 18, Truckee and Radford Bivans, 12, Los Angeles.
